The coronavirus outbreak has a global effect on the society and economy and also impacted the people, organization and operations of Nordic Semiconductor.

Updated Q4 2020

While safety and security have taken top priority, Nordic has also worked to safeguard business continuity, ensuring that the company has remained fully operational for its customers, suppliers and partners. We continue to be resilient and remain focused on maintaining business continuity while keeping all stakeholders safe.

Nordic is proceeding as normal with all its product development projects and has strengthened its online developer support, Nordic DevZone, and customer programs to compensate for the restrictions on travels and physical meetings.

Words from the CEO

Updated Q4 2020

For Nordic Semiconductor our focus during this pandemic is with people safety first, followed by business continuity, both underpinned by Nordic's values of Engagement, Contribution, Knowledge, Respect and Responsibility.

Around the world, we have embraced and refined the use of virtual interaction, enabling us to continue developing our strong customer and community relationships and deliver on expectations and demands. Hence, our operation is to a large extent going as planned and even beyond, including manufacturing which is located in regions with low Covid-19 pressure.

However, risks and uncertainties remain as we see further upside potential in faster technology adaption in parallel with high demand and continuous pandemic measures globally.

We remain committed to being a dependable and strong partner to all our stakeholders also during the pandemic. Staying true to our vision, "Simplified lives through all things connected", our online technical support community, Nordic DevZone, continue to serve developers across the globe. Enabling the potential to improve how we live our lives continues to be important – and perhaps even develops in new directions.

I can assure you that we continue to work diligently to navigate through these uncertain times, to contribute to the well-being of people and business in all the ways we find possible.

Stay safe!
