Force Majeure – caused by Coronavirus Pandemic in China

Dear Valued Customer,

With reference to the impact of current Coronavirus Pandemic in China, the local Chinese governments in different provinces and/or cities have directed certain precautionary measures for up-keeping of health safety. As a result of this strict arrangement, the government decided to extend the Chinese National Holidays (Chinese New Year). Subsequently, public life and infrastructures are restricted and certain companies are currently closed. Further measures and effects are not foreseeable at present.

The series production of certain SUMIDA products takes place on different production locations in China. This incident already has a certain impact on our supply chain and may result in supply bottlenecks, the duration and extent of which cannot be estimated as of today.

Further, this occurrence affects the supply chain with our pre-suppliers for raw- and pre-materials and sub-suppliers in China and the provision of required materials is jeopardized. Of course, we do our utmost to get in close information exchange with our business partners for clarification.

If we do not receive the respective raw-/pre-materials, semi-finished or finished products from our Chinese business partners (despite long-term disposition of our SCM-department) in time and in requested quantities, we cannot fulfill the acknowledged deliveries.

Therefore, we herewith declare Force Majeure for our affected SUMIDA products with immediate effect.

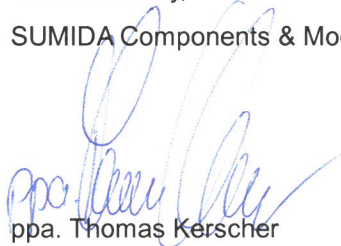

Furthermore, this incident may have an effect to certain specific running projects and may cause a delay in the project management, for example with regard to the set-up respectively relocation of any relevant production line or the timely arrival of key components for the construction.

In case of any further questions to specific delivery situation of your ordered components, please contact your responsible contact person in our Supply Chain department.

We will keep you informed on a regular basis about the progress and the delivery situation of your products.

Yours faithfully,

SUMIDA Components & Modules GmbH
